GRACE DARBY'S REVELATIONS OF LIFE IN TAUNTON

Lower Chamberlain, One of Board of Trustees of Taunton Insane Asylum, Called Upon to Investigate Conditions Revealed Through the Escape of Grace Darby. This Girl Makes Startling Charges Regarding the Asylum.

HORROR MADHOUSE
'LIKE AWFUL DREAM'

Declares in Exclusive Statement to Boston American, Describing Her Long Experience in Asylum and Final Escape, That Food Is Poor and Meagre White Work Is Hard-- Kept With Lunatics for Six Years.

Carried Key Around Her Neck for Seven Months

For years I have dreamed of getting free. For seven months, with the key that would release me hanging around my neck, I have awaited my opportunity to escape. If they were ever to take me back to that awful place it would kill me, even if I didn't kill myself before I would return. —From Grace Darby's exclusive statement to the Boston American.

"For 7 Months I Waited for Chance to Escape"

SPECIAL TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.
BANGOR, Me., May 18.—Following is the first authentic story given in detail by Grace Evelyn Hathorne Darby, the beautiful girl who escaped recently from the Taunton Insane Asylum after being confined there for six years with lunatics, although a physician who examined her previously said that she was not insane. Miss Darby fled to the home of friends in this vicinity and escaped detection until found by the BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent. She dictated the following account of her life and of her imprisonment in the insane asylum to BOSTON AMERICAN correspondents, and her own story is here printed exclusively for the first time. It can be stated positively that she has not yet been seen by representatives for any other newspaper.

BANGOR, Me., May 18.—Revelations of the most amazing character as to the conditions that prevailed in the Taunton Insane Asylum have been made by Grace Darby, the beautiful young woman who escaped from that institution two weeks ago, after spending six years as an associate of lunatics, though it is declared that she is perfectly sane.

The young woman is in this city and has told her whole story exclusively to reporters of the BOSTON AMERICAN, and elsewhere in this issue of the paper it is given to the world.

Grace Darby for years had made ineffectual efforts to get out of the madhouse. Her friends interested a lawyer in her behalf, and she says that the lawyer visited the institution two or three times for the purpose of consulting her, but the superintendent would not let him in or give him any satisfaction. So the legal attempt to get the girl out was dropped and she was compelled to use her own ingenuity.

After being taken to Taunton on July 22, 1900, she says that she was put through all sorts of tests to see if she was mentally unbalanced and that Dr. Beecholt pronounced her all right. Of her life in the institution she speaks with a shudder of horror.

It was work, work, work from daylight to darkness. Those who worked in the kitchen, she says, got plenty to eat. Those who cleaned the tables first found pretty well, also, but if they came late they suffered. There was seldom enough food prepared for all. They seldom got much sleep, and then it was fitful.

Kept Hard at Work.
The young woman declares that she was kept busy when she was not doing heavier work making fancy needlework articles for the personal use of some of the women officials. To such an extent did they keep her employed, she says, that she could not find time to look after her own needs, although she would become more dissatisfied with her position.

Grace Darby is said to be sane. She was brought to the Asylum and for a time she was kept in the "lunatic" ward, but later she was moved to the "sane" ward. She was told by a physician in the institution that she was sane, but she was kept in the "lunatic" ward for a long time.

Met No One on Mile Walk.
They will be surprised to learn that she had no friends in Taunton. She had no one to visit her, and she had no one to help her. She was alone in the institution, and she was kept in the "lunatic" ward for a long time.

Charge Haight & Freese Officials with FRAUD OF $200,000

W. H. Lillis, as President, and Others Accused by Receiver Colt.

Receiver James D. Colt of the Haight & Freese Company charges William H. Lillis, vice-president, director and controller of the company, and other persons with fraudulently converting more than $200,000 of the company's funds to their personal credit and use. The Haight & Freese Company, with offices in Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, New York, and the larger New England cities has been closed over a week on petition of creditors who declared that it was doing business illegally, and who petitioned for the receivership. The charges are contained in a report of the receiver filed today in the clerk's office of the United States Circuit Court.

LEVY DISGUSTED; SAYS SO

What Nan Patterson Must Do in "New Life"

Her contract with a theatrical agent provides that:
She must not drink any intoxicating liquors.
She must not visit saloons, or cafes where liquors are sold.
She must never appear in the public street without a chaperon.
She must lead the model life in every respect.
She must show discrimination in her associations.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Nan Patterson is again in New York prepared to begin that "new life" of which she spoke so often while in the Tongs on the charge of the murder of "Cesare" Young. This "new life" is rigorously enforced by the terms of her theatrical contract with Harry & Benson at $2,000 a week. Further, the "Flanagan" girl says she is only too willing to begin an over again in a different life.

Her contract with Harry & Benson provides that she must at all times be accompanied by a chaperon in the street, that she must be discriminating in her associations, and altogether lead a model life.

The girl is still cheerful and happy at her freedom, despite the fact that she is now in more danger than when she was in the Tongs.

Levy Gives Up in Disgust.

Abraham Levy, the attorney who fought so valiantly for her, has given up the case in disgust at the girl's return to the stage. Nan entered the city as a secret agent, and she is now in the city as a theatrical actress. He is now in the city as a theatrical actress.

Sister as Chaperon.

Nan Patterson is to receive $2,000 from Harry & Benson for the first week, and her recompense thereafter is to depend on the success of her first week's performance.

It was agreed that Harry P. Lowell, who is now in the city as a theatrical actress, would be her chaperon.

According to letters which are now in the possession of Harry P. Lowell, the girl is now in the city as a theatrical actress.

WHITE SAILS BUDDY RYAN DESHLER TO FOR ENGLAND TS HART FACE ASHLEY

NEW YORK, May 18.—John White sailed for England today on the steamer Celtic, but will return and meet the winner of the Britt-Nelson fight, which is to come off in San Francisco in July or August. White is well pleased with the treatment he has been accorded at the hands of the Americans, and still believes that he can win the title.

WHY MEN DON'T MARRY, BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BACHELORS MAY BE DETERRED FROM MARRYING BY OCCASIONAL GLIMPSES INTO THE FUTURE

In Some Instances the Girls Are to Blame for the Backwardness of Bachelors in Proposing

THINK we've given the unfortunate bachelor almost more blame than he merits. The girl who is the cause of his backwardness is the one who is to blame. A good deal of the fault lies with the girls. They frighten the men off by foolish behavior and talk.

When a young man in moderate circumstances goes to a girl and declares that he can't get on without a certain number of dresses, and that in order to be happy she must have such and such a thing, he is to be pitied. He is not a fool, but he is a man who is not to be trusted.

Half the time the girl doesn't mean it, but she thinks it smart to talk that way. She also makes the mistake of being proud of her showy accomplishments, and of her men away from matrimony that they are not to be trusted.

Then there is the girl who always has something to say about a husband, a headache, a cold, or the always feels so tired. You can't blame a man for not wanting to marry that kind of a girl.

It is the kind of a wife she would make—a helpless invalid, whining and fretful. And the timid girl, who all know her. Sometimes she's pretty, and usually she's good natured, but she drives men away from matrimony that they are not to be trusted.

A man may be attracted by her when he first meets her, but when he begins to think of her as his wife the picture changes. He is not to be trusted.

To imagine the devoted home she would make and the comfort he would find in and so to retire into his bachelor shell and make single life as good enough for him.

There is one type of married woman who is largely to blame for much reluctance on the part of men to marry. She is the nag. Every woman who has a husband being nagged to death he makes up his mind to keep his head out of the noose.

He has a lively contempt for the hen-pecked husband and does a great deal of talking about what he would do if he were in Jones's position; but deep down in his heart he knows that he is not a man who is not to be trusted.

Men love peace and like their evenings to be free from worry and strain. A young man likes to come home from business, change his clothes, put on his best necktie, buy a box of candy and sally forth to call on his lady love.

He spends the evening in a pleasant parlor, and you may be sure she does her best to entertain him. It is no wonder, then, that he prefers that to coming home tired, after his day's work, to find a peevish wife who has one idea of entertaining him, to tell about Will's cough and Susan's nagging, and the misbehavior of the kitchen maid.

Instead of dressing up, he puts on an old coat and investigates the intricacies of the said range. Boxes of candy and theatre tickets must give way before the more pressing needs of little shoes that will wear out, and gas bills that must be paid.

These are a few of the vices in life that a bachelor avoids, and so it is not to be wondered at that he thinks twice before incurring them. Most of them are vices that a womanate tact and thought can dispel, but some men are so frightened of matrimony as women are of mice, and they never will conquer their timidity or unwellness, whichever it may be.

No need to Go Beyond Your Own Kitchen for a Gymnasium

Easy Gymnastics With Apparatus Always at Hand

TO have a home gymnasium one does not need intricate and expensive apparatus. Every woman who has a kitchen has a gymnasium of her own.

An athletic girl is not usually difficult to figure. She suggests strength where grace is looked for. Therefore the girl who avails herself of the kitchen gymnasium, where the muscles are trained for the exercise of muscles and yet require no need intricate and expensive apparatus.

At the same time take the lightest movement. This is a splendid exercise for strengthening the back. The extra weight at the bottom of the arm requires considerable strength in the wrist.

The next exercise is accomplished with the rolling pin. Hold with both hands and lift high above the head, then bring it down straight, holding the pin with the fingers and thumb, and the rest of the hand.

There are three points to be obtained from this exercise, namely, the legs about the hips, and the arms about the shoulders. It strengthens the muscles of the back and the stomach, and the legs about the hips, and adds to one's grace of movement.

Besides these there are many other exercises which any one interested in physical development will adopt according to her own needs. The kitchen is a perfect gymnasium, and one may do without any other apparatus.
